Cops probe city's 10th murder

Victim known to police ◗ Convicted of arson, aggravated assault more than a decade ago ◗ Had become family man

Ottawa police are investigating the fatal shooting of a 34-year-old man in Barrhaven after being called to Charleston Street early yesterday morning.

Police said the victim, Khamsouriya Eric Vongviset, was found with multiple gunshot wounds after they received the 911 call at 1:13 a.m.

The victim was taken to the Ottawa Hospital, where he later succumbed to his injuries, police said.

The area around Charleston Street was cordoned off pending further investigation.

Charleston Street resident Wajma Esmattullah said the victim was a father. She spoke with him last Friday to talk about issues with their gas pipes in their row of townhomes.

Just after 1 a.m. she woke to the sound of gunshots and later spoke with police officers when they knocked on her door.

"I'm scared," she said. "I just moved in three months ago."

Other neighbours said they also heard loud noises in the middle of the night in the usually quiet neighbourhood.

"It makes me nervous because I have a four year old," said one Charleston Street neighbour. "It's very unusual."

Smitha Varghese was shocked to see investigators combing through the scene — which is just behind her house on Harbour View Street — yesterday morning.

She also knew Vongviset and would sometimes see him in his backyard during the summer.

"I'm really shocked," she said.

Case details

- No arrests have been made.
- Police yesterday escorted two men to the home where the investigation is focused.
- As they left the scene, one man, who refused to give his name, said his brother-in-law is the victim.

They connected over broadband video conference, but youth-choir members in Ottawa and St. John's also connected through music yesterday.

Two hundred top singers from leading Ottawa youth choirs and 100 members of Shallaway, an award-winning youth choir from Newfoundland, gathered together to sing and hear a lecture at the National Arts Centre by Free The Children co-founder Craig Kielburger as part of a kickoff event for the NAC Orchestra's upcoming tour of the Atlantic provinces.

"Music has the power to break down barriers between people," said Kielburger, who told the young people about his group's work building schools in developing nations. Music, it turns out, is an important component of many development projects, he said, because it has the power to bring people together and motivate them.

Kielburger spoke of a school-building project in Ecuador that had been delayed but was saved after a village elder told him, "There will be a minga." He said he found out that "minga" means "a coming together of people for the common good" when throngs of people from neighbouring villages began showing up to help with the construction.

While Kielburger couldn't think of an English equivalent of the word, he said the gathering of choristers constituted a minga in its own right.

Their music would also be exchanged with music from students in Kenya working with Free The Children.

Preoccupied making plans for the future

- Some protesters hope to stay in Confederation park through winter
- Others are contemplating what comes next if protesters are evicted

SEAN MCKIBBON
@METRONEWS.CA

SEAN MCKIBBON/METRO

▶ Occupy protester and one of the movement's organizers Kevin Donaghy says the protest has had growing pains but has survived and needs support from others in Ottawa's activist community.

From its first day the Occupy Ottawa protest faced the threat of eviction, says Kevin Donaghy.

Sporting a blue ball cap, a sweater and layered shirts, the man, who went by Kevin D in his first interview with Metro when the protest was getting started a month ago, is looking relaxed and happy, but is still concerned about the future at Confederation Park.

"That first night setting up the tent I was like, 'let's see if we can make it past 11 p.m.' and we did and then it just kept building," he says. Now he and other Occupiers are hoping they make it through the winter, despite rumblings from authorities an eviction is coming so the National Capital Commission can set the park up for Winterlude.

Donaghy says a lack of winter tents will inevitably lead to a smaller protest, which would take up less space and be more tolerable to the NCC. He says protesters could even work as volunteers during Winterlude.

Others are contemplating moving to a different space if an eviction comes.

One protester, Mandy Joy, said during one of the Occupy meetings yesterday that protesters might want to think about moving to an indoor space where they could meet and talk.

"We've created a hub, a real network of people to get together and exchange ideas," she said.

"There's a need for more moderates down here," said Eric, a protester who didn't want to give his last name. "The ones that represent the majority of that 99 per cent."

Aims

The Occupiers have many aims:

- Alleviating poverty, redistributing wealth.
- Getting help for mentally ill, drug addicted.
- Protecting First Nations' treaty rights and collective bargaining.

Afghan cenotaph coming home

RYAN REMIORZ/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Canadian Forces engineers pack away commemorative plaques as they dismantle the Canadian War Memorial at Kandahar Airfield in Afghanistan on Saturday.

Names, likeness of the fallen

Soldiers at Kandahar Airfield are taking apart the white marble cenotaph that bears the names and likenesses of the Canadians who have lost their lives as part of the mission in Afghanistan.

The cenotaph has long been a sombre fixture at the airfield.

"It's a sense of profound pride that these soldiers are taking this apart and having the opportunity to repatriate some of the faces and names of our 158 fallen."

LT.-COL. MARK FLINT, WHO LEADS THE TEAM OF ENGINEERS WHO ARE PACKING UP THE CENOTAPH

Erecting new monument

The Defence Department has said it plans to erect a new monument in the Ottawa area. One spot the military is apparently considering is Beechwood Cemetery in the city's east end, which is already home to the national military cemetery where many veterans are buried.

A piece to stay on temporarily

One piece of the monument won't return home just yet.

A jagged chunk of rock will be sent back to Kabul. There, it will function as a temporary memorial for the Canadian soldiers who continue to serve as part of the NATO training mission.

158

A team of engineers is packing up the 158 black granite etchings of every Canadian killed as part of the Afghan mission. The plaques and the marble structure will be shipped back to Canada.

Time to leave

- The Canadian Forces have taken down more than 200 structures at Kandahar Airfield and moved 1,800 sea containers and close to 1,000 vehicles.
- The military expects to be completely out of Kandahar Airfield by mid-December.

U.K. defends William's posting to Falkland Islands; Argentina calls it provocative

British officials yesterday defended the deployment of Prince William to the Falkland Islands, after Argentina reportedly condemned the move as a provocative act.

The Defence Ministry announced this week that the prince, a Royal Air Force search-and-rescue pilot, will be posted to the British outpost for six weeks next year.

The deployment — which will come shortly before the 30th anniversary of Argentina's defeat in the Falklands War — appeared to anger some Argentines.

William will begin the deployment in February.

DEAR OVER-CHARGED, UNDER-APPRECIATED, CONTRACT-LOATHING MOBILE PHONE CUSTOMERS.

Yes. You read that headline correctly.

And by "over-charged, under-appreciated, contract-loathing mobile phone customers" we mean a majority of all mobile customers in Canada.

On average, Canadians pay more than twice as much per minute than US mobile customers. Obviously this is something none of you are very happy about. But your collective grumblings haven't gone unheard. Over the past two years we at WIND Mobile have built our business by listening to your issues and then (surprisingly enough) adapting our offerings to meet your needs.*

- That means getting a $0 phone without being shackled to a painful 3-year term contract.
- That means knowing the distances between Canadians seem shorter if there are no long distance charges to pay on our network.
- That means we understand that the way to keep customers with us is not through restrictive contracts, but by offering fair pricing and transparent billing.

Hundreds of thousands of Canadians have already turned to WIND. And with each new customer we get the opportunity to listen to a new voice of change. So join us as together we create the plans, the services and the pricing that you deserve.

Woman fights for right to die

Opponents fear abuse by people who stand to gain from death

It's been nearly 20 years since Canada's laws on assisted suicide have been challenged by a terminally ill person, and now a similar right-to-die case has thrust the issue back into the spotlight.

Today, lawyers for Gloria Taylor, 63, will be in B.C. Supreme Court to argue against laws that make it a criminal offence to help seriously ill people end their lives.

In August, the Farewell Foundation lost its court battle to have the laws changed because its plaintiffs were anonymous, but in a separate case, Judge Lynn Smith agreed to fast-track a trial for Taylor, who wants a doctor-assisted suicide.

Nancy Rogers was lacing up her wedding dress when word came of a fire spreading through the White Point Beach Resort lodge where she was to be married. Even though flames were shooting 20 metres into the air, Rogers and her fiancé, Michael, decided to plow ahead with the ceremony, with staff at the Nova Scotia resort moving the wedding to another building. She said it wasn't until after the ceremony that she realized how bad the fire was and that all of her wedding gifts and flowers had been destroyed. "It was completely engulfed and everything was up in flames," she said. "We lost all of that stuff, but that's not important to us. We got the most important things."

Told you so, say Vancouver cops after absolute discharge

PHYLICIA TORREVILLAS IN VANCOUVER

Vancouver police Chief Jim Chu reaffirmed his force's initial decision not to rush charges against Stanley Cup rioters after an 18-year-old linked to the riot received an absolute discharge.

Karanvir Singh Saran was arrested just one day after the Canucks' loss to the Boston Bruins of the Stanley Cup final by Surrey RCMP and charged for possession of stolen property.

He pleaded guilty Nov. 2 in the Surrey provincial court for possessing clothing stolen from a store during the June 15 riot. Saran was given an absolute discharge, which means he will not have a criminal record. Surrey RCMP led the investigation and made the arrest, which was independent of the Integrated Riot Investigation Team's investigation.

RICH LAM/GETTY IMAGES

Chu said the absolute discharge supports the force's decision to take its time with the investigations.

"This reaffirms what we have said from the start: It's crucial that we take our time to gather and process evidence to help support the greatest number of convictions with the most severe penalties," Chu said in a statement. "I'm confident that the courts will also recognize that the victims who suffered losses and injuries on June 15 deserve this."

TORONTO. The hacker group Anonymous is standing up for Toronto's Occupy movement.

In a video released on YouTube, the group threatens to launch a cyber-attack on the city if officials interfere with the month-long demonstration.

Mayor Rob Ford asked the occupiers this week to dismantle their tent city in St. James Park.

A few protesters tried to set up a new base in the park behind the Ontario legislature this weekend, but their efforts cut short.

Police shut down the fledgling camp Saturday night and brought the demonstrators back to the original site.

In a tense escalation of the Occupy Portland protest, police in riot gear yesterday surrounded demonstrators in a downtown park area after hundreds of people defied the mayor's order to leave the park by midnight.

By early afternoon, officers had mostly surrounded the camp where the protesters were holding a "general assembly" meeting to discuss their next moves following the eviction order.

Some officers used nightsticks to push people away from the encampment and used loudspeakers to warn that anyone who resisted risked arrest and "may also be subject to chemical agents and impact weapons." Demonstrators chanted "we are a peaceful protest."

Police could be seen carrying at least one protester away from the park. Another man was taken away on a stretcher; he was alert and talking to paramedics, and raised a peace sign to fellow protesters, who responded with cheers.

Portland Mayor Sam Adams had ordered the camp shut down Saturday at midnight, citing unhealthy conditions and the encampment's attraction of drug users and thieves.

Soldiers move in on Brazilian shantytown

Operation part of effort to improve country's image ahead of 2014 World Cup and 2016 Olympics Took police 90 minutes to gain control

More than 3,000 police and soldiers backed by armoured personnel carriers raced into Brazil's biggest slum before dawn yesterday, quickly gaining control of a shantytown ruled for decades by a heavily armed drug gang.

"We're taking back this territory for the 100,000 citizens of Rocinha, people who have needed peace," said Sergio Cabral, governor of Rio de Janeiro state.

The action in Rocinha is part of a campaign to drive the drug gangs out of the city's slums, where the traffickers often rule unchallenged. The city of Rio de Janeiro has more than 1,000 shantytowns where about one-third of its six million people live.

Police simultaneously overran the neighbouring Vidigal slum, also previously dominated by the drug gang Friends of Friends.

Both slums sit between two of Rio's richest neighbourhoods, and Rocinha's ramshackle shacks climb a mountainside covered in Atlantic rain forest. Police methodically cleared alleys and streets on their way up steep, winding roads.

Officials are now calling on the shantytown's residents to help law enforcement find drugs and weapons hidden in the community. The head of Rio's civil police, Marta Rocha, made a special appeal to the "mothers, sisters, grandmothers, aunts" to collaborate with the peacekeeping effort.

- Down a side alleyway, police discovered a house they said belonged to the No. 2 gang leader, Sandro Luiz de Paula Amorim, known as "Peixe," who was captured by police a few days earlier as they circled Rocinha with roadblocks.
- In stark contrast to the impoverished shacks around it, Amorim's three-storey home was outfitted with a large whirlpool bath, swimming pool, massive aquarium, high-definition TV and just one book: the ancient Chinese military text Art of War.

Egyptian blogger taken into custody

Egypt's military ordered a prominent blogger to be held in custody for 15 more days yesterday in a move likely to focus criticism against the country's ruling generals in the run-up to parliamentary elections, due to begin later this month.

The detention of Alaa Abdel-Fattah, a well known blogger and leader during the 18-day uprising that ousted President Hosni Mubarak in February, has elicited international condemnation and galvanized those who accuse the army of using Mubarak-era tactics to smear critics.

His family has used his case to draw attention to the 12,000 Egyptians who have faced military trials this year — one of the key issues that have brought relations between activists and the military to a new low.

‘Super Mario’ Monti takes the helm in Italy

He must now prevent debt default that could tear apart the eurozone and plunge it back into recession

Economist Mario Monti accepted the monumental task yesterday of trying to form a new government that can rescue Italy from financial ruin.

His selection came a day after Silvio Berlusconi reluctantly resigned as prime minister, bowing out after world markets pummelled Italy’s borrowing ability, reflecting a loss of faith in his leadership. Berlusconi quit after the Italian parliament approved new reform measures demanded by the European Union and central bank officials. But even those are not considered enough to right Italy’s ailing economy.

“There is an emergency, but we can overcome it with a common effort,” Monti told the nation.

“In a moment of particular difficulty, Italy must win the challenge to bounce back. We must be an element of strength and not weakness in the European Union, of which we are founders,” he added.

The next Italian government needs to push through even more painful reforms and austerity measures to deal with 1.9 trillion euros in debt, about 120 per cent of the country’s economic output. Many of those debts are coming due soon: Italy has to roll over more than 300 billion euros of its debts next year alone. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Germany out to lure workers from EU crisis zone

Prosperous Germany has a surprising message for sinking Greece: Help Wanted.

With a shrinking labour force and buoyant economy, Germany needs skilled workers to keep its industrial engine churning and is seeking them from Greece, Spain and Portugal where unemployment is soaring.

Germany quickly overcame the financial meltdown that started in 2008 and unemployment is now at a 20-year low of 6.6 per cent. Companies are so desperate for workers that the government has taken to organizing matchmaking sessions between German firms and job seekers from crisis-hit countries.

Among them is Greek civil engineer Christos Kotanidis, who moved to Erlangen in southern Germany three months ago and quickly found work with industrial giant Siemens.

“I decided to look for a job in Germany because it has a stable economy,” he said. “In Greece the economic situation is bad now, but the future looks even worse.”

There are no hard numbers on how many professionals from Europe’s crisis zone have been hired in Germany. Immigration to Germany has shot up by 13 per cent in the past five years, and more than half of the newcomers are from the EU. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NOVEMBER CRUELLEST MONTH FOR PEDESTRIANS?

URBAN COMPASS

STEVE COLLINS
METRO OTTAWA

If you get where you're going on foot with any regularity, you likely already keep a sharp eye out for drivers who might not be doing the same for you, but you probably didn't notice things get three times worse out there in the past week.

According to a Carnegie Mellon University study of accident data the risk of pedestrians being struck and killed by vehicles triples in November after the clocks go back for daylight savings time.

These findings line up with others that have singled out November as a particularly bad one for vehicle-pedestrian collisions. The real witching hour, according to the Carnegie Mellon researchers, is 6 p.m., when rush hour commuters, daylit the week before, must adjust to making their way in the dark.

"The risk of pedestrians being struck and killed by vehicles triples in November after the clocks go back for daylight savings time"

Last Sunday, the day the clocks rolled back, a three-vehicle accident at Bronson and Slater sent two pedestrians to hospital with critical injuries. Another walker got hit on Blair Road at Innes Friday. It would be simplistic to blame the time change alone. Single cause accidents are rare. Usually it's an unlucky combination of causes.

Ontario's chief coroner wants to take a look at some of those causes, and last week announced a probe into all 115 pedestrian traffic deaths in Ontario last year, eight of which occurred here in Ottawa. That was an average year, by the way.

The study will examine the circumstances of each, parsing the age and gender of the victims, intoxication or distraction, road conditions, visibility and other factors, with an eye to cutting down on these preventable deaths.

The city is also in the process of overhauling its traffic safety plan, the last one of which aimed to reduce total traffic fatalities in Ottawa to 22 a year by 2010.

Apart from our failure to hit that benchmark last year (38 people died on our streets and roads), one has to ask just who decided 22 dead pedestrians, cyclists and motorists was an acceptable tally. Had the quota been met, would a celebratory "mission accomplished" announcement have been in order?

Thankfully, the Safer Roads Ottawa Program acknowledges that one is too many, aims not at a target number, but "towards zero," through better engineering of roads, bike lanes and intersections, and education and enforcement targeted at everyone who uses them.

No matter how improbable complete success might be, that's a zero-means-zero pledge I can get behind.

Worth Mentioning

HERMAN CAIN SAYS JOKE ABOUT ANITA HILL WAS 'MEANT TO BE FUNNY'. U.S. Republican presidential candidate Herman Cain — facing allegations of sexual harassment — is defending a joke he made about Anita Hill.

Cain said he was approached at a recent event by a supporter who said Hill was trying to contact him.

Cain responded by asking whether Hill was going to endorse him. Hill famously accused then-Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas of sexual harassment.

In an appearance Friday on Fox News Channel, Cain called the supporter's comment "hilarious" and said his own reply was meant to be funny.

Four women have said Cain sexually harassed them when he led the National Restaurant Association more than a decade ago.

Some Cain backers have compared the Georgia businessman's treatment to that of Thomas, another high profile black conservative.

Italian team tackles mafia on soccer pitch

The Italy national team trained yesterday on a pitch that was confiscated from a crime syndicate to show support for the fight against the mafia.

Cesare Prandelli's team was welcomed onto the pitch by around 1,000 spectators. The initiative was organized by Libera — an association that co-ordinates groups trying to stop organized crime.

"The fight against the mafia happens on the ground, but above all in Rome, in parliament," Libera president Luigi Ciotti said. "The real fight against the mafia is done with social policies, defending jobs, starting with those who have them.

"I invite the football federation to join Libera's network of 1,600 associations without political colours."

Calabria's 'Ndrangheta crime syndicate is today considered more powerful than the Sicilian mafia and has become one of the world's biggest cocaine traffickers.

"It's the third time we've inaugurated this pitch," Ciotti added. "Either we really put ourselves to work for change, or it will all be in vain. Change starts with each one of us."

Lautner's 'were'withal

Twilight's main werewolf talks about the difficulty in translating some strange situations from the book onto the big screen Is mum on a rumoured future project with Milk filmmakers

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN HOLLYWOOD

For the fourth installment of the Twilight franchise, Taylor Lautner knew he was going to be in for some pretty bizarre stuff — even for a franchise about vampires, werewolves and moody teens. His character, the werewolf Jacob, finds himself in the awkward position of "imprinting" on Renesmee, the newborn daughter of Bella (Kristen Stewart) and Edward (Robert Pattinson). "That was ... tough," Lautner admits. "Because what is imprinting? What do you look like when you imprint? I mean, those were all the questions going through my head."

For the uninitiated, imprinting is what happens when a werewolf finds his soulmate, at least in author Stephenie Meyer's world.

"Luckily we had Stephenie on set the entire time, and trust me I asked her a million times, 'OK, explain to me one more time what imprinting is exactly?' and 'What is he doing when he's imprinting?' It was very, very confusing," Lautner says.

HANDOUT

And filming the sequence didn't necessarily make it any clearer, unfortunately, thanks to the mechanics of the special effects. "When we filmed it, they put an X on a wall and said, 'This is Renesme. You're going to walk in the room, you're going to look at the X and you're going to imprint,'" Lautner remembers.

"And I'm like, 'Are you kidding me?' It was tough, it really was. But now after seeing the final version, I'm really happy with it. It really is a special moment, but on the day it was a leap of faith."

The business with the baby was something he'd been anticipating, of course, and he admits that while he gets the overall romance of the story, it does seem like an odd consolation prize. "I get a baby? Yeah, yeah. I have gotten over that by now," he says. "I remember the first time reading the book, I was so confused. I was like, 'Wait. He's trying to get Bella the whole time, and he strikes out so he goes with her child?' It really took a second."

What's next for Lautner

Since Taylor Lautner shared a dinner with director Gus Van Sant and screenwriter Dustin Lance Black recently, Hollywood insiders have been speculating about some sort of team-up. All that came to a head when, earlier this month, it was reported that Lautner would be starring in a movie directed by the Milk filmmaker, based on an unidentified article published in the New Yorker. Lautner is cryptic when pressed on the issue.

"He is a very, very talented director who I've always looked up to and I've always wanted to work with," he says. "It's very premature, so I really don't have much so say now other than the fact that I really, really respect and would love the opportunity to work with him." As for the report that it's based on a New Yorker article? "Um... there is a project like that floating around somewhere on this planet," Lautner says.

ANNE BRODIE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

▶ Simon Baker

Simon Baker's affable, open Patrick Jane on the TV phenom The Mentalist is light years away from the mannered, restrained wizard of Wall Street he plays in the financial thriller Margin Call. Jared Cohen leads a team of self-serving execs to find a way to cover his company's worthless leverage in the first days of the economic meltdown.

You play a seemingly soulless man caught in one of the worst disasters of our time.

If there is any parallel I can draw in the journey, my character is a device. We follow young Seth, Penn Badgley, and the young analyst played by Zachary Quinto and Kevin Spacey and a little of Demi Moore on emotional trips. Jared is largely a device, like the last scene that I have with Penn. Here is the young guy that wants to be Gordon Gekko and a hotshot, and he's definitely a product of that mould. I thought it was important to make a deal with the devil. He's not going to stand down and show signs of weaknesses in the offices with coworkers but that affected quality is what I was looking at, the protective shell. That's how they disconnect themselves emotionally.

It's an interesting view of the crash, seeing not from the victims' point of view, but from the perpetrators. Are we meant to feel sympathy?

I don't think we're meant to feel sympathy but I think that what it does reflect is that they are human and fallible. It's just too easy to pin an idea of them being soulless, inhuman people. I don't think we should feel sympathy, but understand that greed really is a part of human nature and it can take over and this is where we see it.

Deep down inside Kevin Spacey there is a lot of soul. His humanity sort of wins out, and in my case you can see vulnerability a tiny bit but he never lets it show.

Morality is the core of the film, the idea being that amorality in business works.

Writer director J. C. Chandor is the son of a guy that worked his whole career in the finance industry and he's a pretty folksy kind of a guy. He's obviously going to impart his own soulful kind of approach to what that world is and his take on it and play with the idea of it being a morality tale. But he doesn't. At some points it is heavy handed, but there are some grace notes and delicate notes, that are hard to verbalize that just land sometimes. There are certain moments, particularly Paul Bettany's performance.

Crystal returns to host Academy Awards for the ninth time

CHRIS PIZZELLO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Billy Crystal

The 63-year-old comedian and veteran Oscar host said Thursday on Twitter that he is hosting this season's Academy Awards "so the young woman in the pharmacy will stop asking my name when I pick up my prescriptions."

"Some of the best moments of my career have happened on the Oscar stage," said Crystal in a statement from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

"I am thrilled to be back there."

This will be the ninth Oscar stint for Crystal, one of the most popular Oscar hosts of recent years.

His last time was in 2004.

Only Bob Hope hosted more Oscar shows.

Academy president Tom Sherak called Crystal "a comic legend and Oscar icon, and it feels good to have him back where he belongs."

The naming of Crystal follows a groundswell of sentiment for his return after he led a tribute to Bob Hope on the 2011 Oscar show for which he received a standing ovation. Crystal said later he was moved by the warm reception.

Crystal previously hosted in 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1997, 1998, 2000, and 2004 — some of the most successful shows in Oscar history. The 1998 show was the highest-rated Oscar telecast ever, when Titanic sailed away with multiple trophies.

Comedian Eddie Murphy had been chosen to host the Feb. 26, 2012, show, but pulled out Wednesday following the departure on Tuesday of producer and friend Brett Ratner, who left amid criticism of his use of a pejorative term for gay men at a screening of the director's action comedy Tower Heist.

▶ Adam Sandler's Jack and Jill has the dubious honour of being among the worst-reviewed movies of all time.

This weekend, Adam Sandler's comedy Jack and Jill, in which he cross-dresses to play his own sister, debuted to a zero per cent — later upped to three per cent — rating on the critic aggregation website Rotten Tomatoes. Even Yogi Bear and The Smurfs scored higher. Here are the few films that scored even worse — zero per cent and staying there.

Troll 2 (1990)
The cult classic, about a group of vegetarian monsters, is so bad, it was the subject of a documentary called Best Worst Movie — directed by one of the cast members.

Jennifer Lopez has a thing for backup dancers.

Not only was her second husband, Chris Judd, one (before he got that sweet, sweet divorce settlement, that is) but it seems like her new rebound, Casper Smart, is one as well.

The rhythmic Smart has, according to his personal website caspersmart.com (which he has since taken offline since Us Weekly broke the news that he and Lopez are dating), had a role in Honey 2 and was a dancer in Step Up 3D.

His special skills include "krumping, acrobatics, breaking [and] popping."

Another skill? He's never in a shirt!

A source tells Us Weekly that he's "popular with the ladies because he goes shirtless!"

So there you have it. Jennifer Lopez is now into men who can krump, break, pop, and not clothe themselves.

Be careful about what you say about Kim Kardashian.

The newly single reality star has hired lawyer Marty Singer to silence Jonathan Jaxson, who says he is her former publicist and claims her 72-day marriage to basketball player Kris Humphries was a giant farce, according to TMZ.com.

On Friday, Jaxson told Good Day L.A., "The whole show itself was staged to a T."

Earlier, he told the Elvis Duran Morning Show, "She knew weeks before getting married she didn't want to do it. She's never gotten over [former boyfriend/NFL player Reggie Bush]."

Kardashian is suing Jaxson for $200,000, a sum that seems low for a Kardashian.

But maybe she's just trying to raise some capital to pay the return postage on all of those wedding presents she has to return?

Are you over-parenting?

Parents feel like they need to micromanage their children's every move so they fulfill their true potential But a more relaxed, hands-off approach to parenting takes pressure off kids and parents

EMMA E. FORREST
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

Being a parent is a stressful job. These days, you're not only expected to cover the basics — love, food, clothing, schooling, junior taxi service, but our perfectionist culture tells parents that we must also execute a punishing schedule geared to transforming our child into star pupil, tennis champ and school musical lead.

But hyper-parenting — where parents push their kids in the name of "fulfilling their potential" — doesn't necessarily lead to happier, healthier, more successful kids. Not every child can be the next Ronaldo or Picasso, and parental pressure and over-involvement can lead to children's anxiety, fear of failure and inability to be self-reliant.

Economist Dr. Bryan Caplan caused a stir earlier this year with his book, Selfish Reasons to Have More Kids: Why Being a Great Parent is Less Work and More Fun than You Think, which suggested that hot-housing has little long-term effect on your child. Caplan points out that studies on twins and adopted kids show that the long-term effects of parenting have little impact on a wide variety of outcomes including health, happiness, intelligence and success.

Children can't be molded, he says. Like flexible plastic, they respond to pressure but return to their original shape when pressure is released, so there's no point trying to change them. "Even happiness is not something that parenting makes or breaks," says Caplan.

"Hyper-parenting is exhausting. It turns childrearing into a cross between a competitive sport and product-development"
CARL HONORE

Because you can't change your kids, pushing them to excel is a waste of time and a burden on your relationship with them, say supporters of a new type of more serene parenting.

"We all want the same thing: for our children to be happy and healthy and to reach their full potential," says Carl Honore, slow advocate and author of Under Pressure: Rescuing our Children from the Culture of Hyperparenting. "And we can all have this if we get the right balance between doing too much for our children and doing too little."

Focusing less on kids is better for parents, too. Those who over-parent are three times more likely to suffer depression and anxiety, according to clinical psychologist Dr. Madeline Levine, who believes that over-involved parenting is parents' way of correcting what they saw as wrong in their own lives. It's also better for your kids if you invest in your relationship.

"Hyper-parenting is exhausting. It turns childrearing into a cross between a competitive sport and product-development," says Honore. "It's tiring, expensive and stressful. All this puts a squeeze on a marriage, with both partners feeling tired and overstretched. They also have less time to spend together on their own. Ultimately, it can break a marriage."

But if we all want the best for our kids, how do we get a balance between providing opportunities and being hands-off? Caplan says if you're consciously thinking about your parenting style, you're already on the right track.

"Ignore the panic and peer pressure; your child will be fine," Honore advises. "Trust your instincts. Find your own way to parent. Listen to and observe your child.

"A child is not a project or a trophy or a piece of clay you can mould into a work of art. A child is a person who will thrive if allowed to be the protagonist of his own life."

Tips

SLOW PARENTING

CARL HONORE
SLOW-PARENTING ADVOCATE

- Experiment with not reading parenting manuals and websites for a week. Try to work out your own style of parenting and what works best for your family rather than worrying about what everyone else is doing.
- The next time you take your child to the playground, resist the temptation to jump in and co-play at every turn. Back off so your child can play on her own or with other children.
- Schedule a few hours each week that are free of structured activity when the family can rest, chat, play games, cook together — whatever you feel like when the moment arrives.
- Let your children tell you how school went today, rather than demanding a full debriefing the moment they step through the door.

▶ Playing in the leaves is more fun than soccer coaching, for you and your children.

Over-parenting

Economist Dr. Bryan Caplan shares signs to help you know if you're over-parenting.

- You find yourself yelling at your kids when you're in the process of doing something that is for their "benefit". The activity is hurting the relationship for the sake of a future benefit you can't guarantee.
- Your child doesn't sleep through the night after three months. Train him to sleep, rather than always going into his room.
- You're en route to an activity, and both you and your kid can't face it. If your child is complaining and you're thinking you can't be bothered to go, it's clearly become a chore.

CASE STUDY

Wise mom: "I refuse to compete"

Sarah is a mother of two from Vancouver:

"It is my belief that we move from competing with our peers (with jobs, experiences, money, homes, cars, etc.) to competing with our peers through our children (number of languages they speak, their grades, how many laps they can swim, etc.).

I have taken a strictly conscious decision to not engage in that.

The number of activities that some of my kids' peers do is nuts. Some play hockey five times a week, piano, soccer and have extra tutoring – It takes parents, grandparents and nanny to keep that schedule. I've seen kids who are tiny for their age, always tired and never have time for unstructured, creative play with kids their age. Makes me wonder what important part of them is not being developed.

I see a lot of parents here forget that the foundation of their family – of their children – is the relationship between the parents. When that crumbles, the whole show goes down!

Tech it Away program gets high schools involved in rounding up and recycling unwanted electronics Find out how you can get involved

BEN KNIGHT
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

They have added a sculpture competition to the event.

Recycling old electronics is a baffling business for many Canadians.

Sure, we know where to put our used bottles and newspapers.

But computers, televisions and discarded cellphones? Not so sure.

That's why Best Buy Canada set up Tech it Away, a program that gets high schools actively involved in rounding up and recycling unwanted or obsolete electronics.

"The program originated from the idea of making sure that people understand the importance of recycling their electronics," says Danielle Jang, communications manager for Best Buy Canada.

"There's a lot that goes into it, and we wanted to make sure that we took responsibility for that, spreading the word and working with the younger generation. They get excited about it, and they can see the results of it as well."

Ten selected schools, in Vancouver, Calgary and Toronto held community recycling drives last month. In the competitive, high-turnover field of electronics, the company feels campaigns like this are essential.

"There's new technology out there that's better for the environment, and we want people to start using that instead," Jang explains

"And then we want to take the old electronics that they have and recycle them properly."

Each participating school receives a grant of up to $10,000, earmarked for the purchase of newer, more energy-efficient electronics.

And there's an artistic element as well.

"This year, we added a sculpture competition. Students took some of the collected electronics, and were tasked with the challenge to create a sculpture. The winner was actually from Downsview Secondary School in Toronto. It's a really cool sculpture of a tree. They used wires, the keys on a keyboard, the insides of a mobile phone, and they constructed a really neat sculpture of a tree. It's pretty cool."

The program has sparked some healthy, eco-friendly competition between rival schools, each eager to collect more disused gizmos than their local rivals.

"The kids got on board really quickly," says Jang. "They're out there telling their friends and families and their community to bring everything that they've got in their basements to drop it off. They get excited about that."

ECO-FRIENDLY FLOWER SERVICE BLOSSOMING

My first suggestion: Ask your favourite florists if they have local, seasonal and pesticide-free flowers. Those three factors alone ooze eco-friendliness.

You're smart to avoid flowers that have been shipped from far, far away, and not just because of their carbon footprint.

Many cut flowers come from developing countries, where growers use toxic pesticides banned in Canada.

Many cut flowers come from developing countries, where growers use toxic pesticides banned in Canada

And no one tests imported flowers for pesticide residues. The florist might look at you funny, but when it comes to cut flowers, many of us shop with our noses. I t's time we greened up our bouquet shopping skills. The more who ask our local florists for pesticide-free blooms from local farmers, the quicker they'll clue in. Another suggestion is to search Veriflora.com. Veriflora is a sustainability certification program for fresh cut flowers and potted plants. Search their site by province for a company that abides by their agricultural sustainability certification and eco-labelling program.

A Google search might also turn up companies that sell organic or Fair Trade Certified bouquets.

Many I found online only deliver in the U.S. — OrganicBouquet.com and Flowerbud.com — but join them on Facebook and you'll know when they branch into Canada.

To creep or cash in? Study shows that when it comes down to a job offer or the web, one-third of recent grads would place a greater weight on the freedom to surf social networking sites than on a high salary

CASSANDRA GARRISON
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

New grads are facing higher unemployment rates than they've ever had to deal with before. It's no wonder we are hearing cries on the subject from the early 20s crowd. A new study, though, could raise some eyebrows over their priorities when it comes to careers.

The results of the U.S. study, conducted by Cisco and published by Hot Hardware, show that new college graduates care more about access to social networking sites than they do about salary when considering a job offer.

Shocked? About 56 per cent of the 2,800 students and young professionals polled across the globe are so turned off by the idea of logging out that they would most likely turn down or ignore a job offer from a company that banned those social networking sites.

The ability to work remotely also proved more important than pay. About 40 per cent said they would actually accept less money if it meant they could telecommute and use social networking sites on whatever device they wanted to while working.

A flexible work schedule was another plus — about one-third of respondents said it is their right, not privilege, to have flexible hours and permission to work remotely.

In the digital age we live in, it's probably no surprise that 81 per cent of the respondents said they want the freedom to choose what device they use for work. Additionally, 68 per cent said they think they should be able to surf social networking sites with their work devices.

And why not? Thirty-one per cent of young professionals who participated in the study said their social media know-how is one of the traits that landed them the job in the first place.

If being Facebook savvy is an important factor to employers during the interview process, then we guess it's no surprise that their employers will be updating their statuses at work.

These results are perhaps a sign of times as to how important social networking has become to the business world but, geez, what's next — a 40-hour work week?

2/3 of college students will ask about media policies during job interviews.

56 per cent of college students will not accept a job from a company that bans social media, or they will circumvent the policy.

What he has to say:
"I love a challenge. Math is fun to me. It's just like playing with toys."

Do you wish you had a 'normal' childhood?
"I can't imagine my life without math. My parents have done their best to not make it what defines me. When I'm older, I'm not sure I'll love it like I do now. I would also like to be a lawyer or a doctor."

KEEPING DIABETES IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Today is World Diabetes Day. This day marks the 120th birthday of Canadian Frederick Banting, who, more than 90 years ago, discovered insulin, a drug that is responsible for helping some of the 366 million people with diabetes around the world maintain a healthy life.

Jean Claude Mbanya

And yet, just shy of a century after it was discovered, many people are still unable to access the essential care they need. They are denied the right to a healthy future and, in many cases, the right to life.

Every year, more than four million people die from diabetes, and tens of millions more suffer disabling and life-threatening complications such as heart attack, stroke, kidney failure, blindness and amputation.

Diabetes also has negative consequences for certain infectious diseases, other non-communicable diseases (NCDs) and for mental health.

Diabetes is not only a health crisis, it is a societal catastrophe. Governments worldwide are struggling to meet the cost of diabetes care.

It is my hope that World Diabetes Day 2011 will carry forward the momentum started last September, when 193 heads of government and state signed a political declaration at the United Nations in New York. This momentous declaration was a product of the first ever meeting on the control and prevention of NCDs, including diabetes.

Today gives us the chance to come together and raise awareness of one of the deadliest epidemics of the 21st century, but it also gives us the chance to reflect on how we can help turn diabetes advocacy and rhetoric into action throughout the world.

Join the international diabetes community in celebrating this World Diabetes Day. Whether you choose to dress in blue, floodlight a local landmark in blue or alert a local government representative to the impact of diabetes in your community, we all have a part to play today.

It is time we stopped sleepwalking into a sick future. Act on diabetes, now.

– Jean Claude Mbanya, president, International Diabetes Federation

CREDIT EDUCATION WEEK CANADA CELEBRATES ITS FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

In 2007, Credit Canada and Capital One Canada teamed up to create the first Credit Education Week Canada (CEWC), with the objective to raise public awareness and educate Canadians about the many issues and challenges they face managing their finances, spending and savings.

Now in its fifth year, CEWC 2011 will be looking at Canada's "Sandwich Generation" and the unique financial pressures they face.

Did you know:

• Eighty-two per cent of Canada's Sandwich Generation are not financially prepared, or don't know if they will be able to support their aging parents.

• One-third of those Canadians who support both a child and aging parents provide more than $500 per month to support their parents.

COMPELLING STORIES ACROSS CANADA

Credit Canada and Capital One Canada sponsored a contest asking people to share their inspiring or compelling stories about how they conquered their credit issues and how it changed their life. Contributors were asked to share their stories in 300 words or less.

Dale Koe of Toronto submitted the winning entry worth $5,000, Dawn Erstelle from Winnipeg took home $2,000 for the second-place story, while Esme Gosling from Pender Island, B.C., cashed in the third-place entry, which was worth $1,000.

Beginning today, and running through to Friday, more than 100 events and financial literacy workshops at YMCAs and community centres across the country will occur under the Credit Education Week banner thanks to the support and funding of all sponsors.

Tomorrow, the founding sponsors of CEWC — Credit Canada and Capital One Canada — will officially kick off the week with the launch of its Professional Development Day at the Toronto YMCA.

The event launch, hosted by Alison Griffiths, host of the television program Maxed Out, is a unique opportunity for financial industry leaders to bring consumer awareness to the myriad of financial issues impacting Canadians, as well as show their support and commitment to financial literacy initiatives.

The day will feature an impressive slate of speakers from media, not-for-profit and key government agencies, who will discuss the many financial management issues affecting Canada's Sandwich Generation. Neil Pasricha, author of The Book of Awesome, will deliver the event's keynote address.

CEWC 2011's event launch is free and open to the public.

The climax of every CEWC is the dinner gala, which will be held Wednesday at the Four Seasons Hotel in Toronto. The gala will be hosted by CTV's consumer affairs expert Pat Foran, while bestselling author and international entrepreneur Debbie Travis will deliver the gala's keynote address.

Gamblers with smart play habits are good for our business.

Our position is clear:

We don't want problem gamblers playing our games; we want players who can manage their play over the long-term. To do this, we've developed an innovative Responsible Gambling (RG) program comprised of prevention-based initiatives designed to educate players and encourage healthy play habits. For players who are concerned about their gambling, or exhibit signs of potential gambling problems, our staff is trained to refer them to independent support services.

In collaboration with researchers, clinicians, and not-for-profit agencies like Credit Canada, OLG's RG program has made significant strides in recent years. We've developed a player-focused education campaign, engaging players with RG information in a compelling way. We've made substantive enhancements to our voluntary Self-Exclusion program including installing facial recognition technology across gaming sites, and offering individuals the option to register for the program at treatment and debt counselors across the province.

GRAND PRIZE WINNER ($5,000)

"Do you think that looks good? People will LAUGH at you," my dad would say when I was a teenager.

He used to berate me for wearing baggy clothes (which were "in" by the way). Maybe I took it to heart because shortly after I grew an appetite for expensive cottons, custom tailoring and, of course, show-stopping accessories.

I wake up on my 1,200 thread-count bedsheets, turn over on my side and look at my Omega watch — 6 a.m. I hate getting up sometimes, especially after having expensive takeout at 11 p.m. right before bed.

So I drag myself off to the shower and do my thing, come back to my room and look in my closet. Thinking about it, there must be more than $4,000 worth of clothing in there.

Well, keeping up appearances is important, right? Right! So who will I be today? Hugo? Giorgio? Mr. Lauren? I choose Hugo and head off to class.

Skip ahead three years, after I discovered my taste in finer clothing wasn't just a small expense, but had accumulated to thousands of dollars worth of debt. I was unemployed while going to university, living on student loans and my credit cards. I had to rethink my entire budget (if there ever was one) because, hell, I needed to eat.

Now, I'm living with the budget, slowly chipping away at my debt. Last week, I shopped for clothes at an "Honest" discount store in Toronto; I bought three sweaters, a jacket, and a pair of pants for $49. If only I had thought of entrusting my appearance to Ed, instead of Yves, Tommy, and Mr. Ferragamo sooner I would be eating fresh fruit from a bowl instead of eating processed fruit from a can.

DAWN ERSTELLE TAKES REALISTIC APPROACH TO ELIMINATE DEBT

THE YEAR: 2010.

THE GIRL: 27 years old, no savings, no RRSPs, $10,000 student loan debt, $4,000 credit card debt, $30,000 annual income.

THE PROBLEM: I spent more than I earned and wagered on a wealthy future self.

After five hopeful years without a lottery win or large inheritance from an estranged family member, it was time to take a more realistic approach. I decided to make a lifestyle change.

Here's the thing, frugality is seen as a dull means to a long-awaited end when you are in your 20s and want something NOW.

Nobody is marketing responsible money management as cool, or advertising that savings accounts instead of personal loans will make you happy. Hardly anybody proclaims how much fun it is to save instead of spend, and few announce that it's hip to buy second-hand or not buy at all.

Luckily, I'm pretty secure with my level of cool, fun and hip so I had no qualms about experimenting with "conscious spending" two years ago.

I pared down my monthly expenses and attempted to purchase only necessary stuff like concert tickets, coffee and beer. I sold lots of my possessions, including my car, and decided not to upgrade any of my tech devices. I have primarily bought my clothes at thrift shops and made the majority of my meals at home.

Admittedly, this may sound like an unattractive situation, but here's the sexy part ... in two years:

- I have $10,000 in my "living the dream" savings account.
- I have eliminated all $4,000 in credit card debt (the student loans are slowly dwindling).
- I have $2,000 in an RRSP account.
- I have built healthy saving/spending habits

My living the dream muse? I'm flying to Asia this winter — seven countries, six months, zero days at the office and infinite possibilities!

MAYBE ESME GOSLING SHOULD HAVE LISTENED TO HER MOM

Don't tell my mother, but she might have been right. I didn't want to admit it at the time, but a question like, "So, how do you earn a living?" might have been a good one.

Instead, I thought, "What does it matter? We're in love!" So what if our first date was spent at his house — well, his sister's house actually — watching a video that he downloaded and drinking Red Rose tea? It wasn't cheap, it was cosy.

Second date, much the same, but we did a lot of talking, and women love talking! As things progressed, it's true that he didn't buy me flowers or gifts (too predictable) — heck, he didn't even buy groceries, even though he was practically living with me at that point.

OK, you guessed it: Suddenly, he was living with me and how could I ask him to pay rent given how much he was doing around the house to help out? Doing what? Well, just stuff. You know. I, personally, didn't know because I was at work, but, you know.

But what woman wouldn't give anything for a man who would be there at the end of the day with a cup of tea, a hot bath, and yet another downloaded movie? I wouldn't give anything for it, but I did end up giving, approximately (OK, exactly) $12,958 a year for it. (Times two because I'm a slow learner in some ways, so it took me a couple of years.)

Finally, even I had to admit that while money doesn't buy happiness, it sure goes a long way towards rent and groceries. So, yes, mom, you do have my permission to do extensive financial background checks on the next man I bring home — as long as you don't say you told me so!

Ticats finally win in playoffs

Porter's OT touchdown gives them first post-season victory since 2001

TOM BOLAND/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Tiger-Cats quarterback Quinton Porter runs in for a touchdown against the Alouettes in overtime yesterday.

The Hamilton Tiger-Cats' decade of playoff frustration is over, and so is the Montreal Alouettes' reign as Grey Cup champion.

Quinton Porter ran in from the one-yard line for a touchdown in overtime and the Tiger-Cats' defence stoned the Alouettes as Hamilton won a thrilling CFL East Division semifinal 52-44 over Montreal yesterday.

It was the Ticats' first playoff victory since they beat Montreal in the 2001 semifinal. They will face the Blue Bombers in Winnipeg in the East final next Sunday.

TICATS	ALOUETTES

"I'm excited for us to go through what we went through and still win, it shows a lot about the team we are," said quarterback Kevin Glenn, who came back from a nasty hit in the third to guide his team through a wild 38-point fourth quarter.

"We get knocked down but we get back up. That's what we're about."

The Ticats are attempting to become the first third-place team in the East to win a Grey Cup since Montreal in 1970.

The Alouettes didn't go quietly, erasing Hamilton's 24-16 halftime lead with a ferocious fourth quarter in which they fought back to tie the game three times to force overtime and send the Olympic Stadium crowd of 33,501 into a frenzy.

Anthony Calvillo was hot, completing 30 passes for 513 yards and three TDs for Montreal. But he couldn't get his team into the end zone in overtime as Brandon Whitaker had a ball go off his fingertips on third and two to end the game.

Esks roll past stumbling Stamps

ESKIMOS	STAMPS

The Edmonton Eskimos capitalized on shoddy tackling and turnovers to beat the Calgary Stampeders 33-19 in the CFL's West Division semifinal yesterday.

The Eskimos will travel to Vancouver next Sunday to play the B.C. Lions for the right to represent the West in the Grey Cup.

The win spoiled the debut of Stampeders quarterback Drew Tate. The Texan was starting in his first CFL playoff game after taking over from starter Henry Burris with three games left in the regular season.

The game was decided in the first 30 minutes.

The Eskimos built up a 25-9 halftime lead as the Stamps did themselves in with their own mistakes.

The win extended a turnaround season for Edmonton. The Eskimos missed the playoffs in 2010 but finished second in the West in the regular season this year with an 11-7 record.

Fate of NBA season may be decided today

Decision day for NBA players may have arrived.

The players' association will meet in New York this morning, a session that could lead to the end of the lockout or send it into a bigger tailspin. Representatives from all 30 teams are expected, as are other players, to examine and discuss a seven-page summary of the NBA's latest collective bargaining proposal to the union.

The proposal, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, was dated to be delivered to union executive director Billy Hunter on Friday. At least some of the people who will be in the NBPA meeting said yesterday they had not yet seen the offer, creating more than a little confusion over what exactly is on the table.

"We haven't asked for anything more than what we had," Miami Heat player representative James Jones said yesterday. "We understand the times. We understand the economy. We just want a fair deal where both sides are bearing the weight of the present times and with an eye on the future of the game of basketball."

By today, things could finally become clear — because this union meeting may decide if basketball will be played this season.

There are 17 items in the memo, including how teams paying a luxury tax would not be able to acquire free agents in sign-and-trade deals after the 2012-13 season. One of the key points comes on Page 5, where the NBA says "there will be no limitations on a player's ability to receive 100 per cent guaranteed salary in all seasons of a contract."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The NBA wants a 72-game season to begin Dec. 15. For that to happen, a handshake deal almost certainly would have to be in place this week.

U.S. claims Four Nations hockey gold over Canada

Star Canadian Wickenheiser nets two assists, but misfires in shootout

Canada settled for the silver medal at the Four Nations Cup women's hockey tournament after dropping a 4-3 decision to the United States yesterday in Nykoping, Sweden.

American goalie Jessie Vetter stopped Canadian forward Hayley Wickenheiser in the third round of the shootout to end it.

The Canadians had tied the game with just over four minutes left in regulation on Natalie Spooner's second goal of the period.

"We couldn't have had a better player to have the game on her stick. Sometimes it goes that way in a shootout."

CANADIAN HEAD COACH DAN CHURCH ON HAYLEY WICKENHEISER'S FAILED SHOOTOUT ATTEMPT YESTERDAY

"I was really proud of their ability to be resilient and bounce back," Canadian head coach Dan Church said of his players. "Every time (the U.S.) got up, we battled back."

After a scoreless overtime, both teams scored in the first round of the shootout and were stopped in the second round.

Hilary Knight then scored for the U.S. to put the pressure on Wickenheiser.

"To lose in a shootout is always disappointing," said Jayna Hefford of Kingston who had Canada's lone shootout goal. "It's a tough way to lose but we're trying to take the positives out of this week."

Montreal's Caroline Ouellette had the other goal for Canada. Kelli Stack scored two for the United States and Jenny Potter added a single.

The U.S. fired 56 shots on Shannon Szabados of Edmonton while Vetter faced 35 shots in the American net.
